

This book is published to assist ministers, elders, and other teachers in pre-confession class. It is also to guide covenant youth as they prepare to profess their faith during public worship. It is structured around the four questions asked of those in Reformed churches who have reached covenant maturity.

As an introduction to the study of these questions, the book considers the creeds and confessions of the Reformed churches, religion, the “why” of profession of faith, and the “when” of profession of faith in the four initial lessons.

In some sense public profession of faith is the mature response of a covenant member to the Lord’s act of grace as He baptized them. It should be a moment of solemn awareness and great joy.
